IsoMetrix: Environment, Health, Safety, Quality & Community Management Software

IsoMetrix is a Web-based business software application that assists companies to achieve their sustainability goals by providing critical information to those who need it, when they need it. IsoMetrix is designed to help companies manage their environmental, health, safety and quality programs and the integrated risk across their organization. Developed as a database application to meet the needs of users, IsoMetrix has been designed based on the structure of the ISO 14000, ISO 9000 and OHSAS 18000 series of international standards.

IsoMetrix is built on a SQL Server database and helps organizations identify, assess and prioritize issues, plan and follow up on management requirements and critically measure performance. It allows for the allocation of resources, the assignment of responsibilities and an ongoing evaluation of activities in relation to the management of the organization's quality, safety, health and environmental impacts.

With IsoMetrix, an organization can sort, search, categorize, prioritize, analyze and communicate information. Data can be accessed and viewed to each person's specifications and relevance to their area of responsibility, allowing them to make informed management decisions instantly.

The software also facilitates regular updating of the management programs as well as assisting in the implementation of the commitments stated in the organization's policies, allowing for easy management and auditing. It can address incident management, task management, meetings management, permit management, compliance management, stakeholder management, inspections management, monitoring data management, notifications and escalations management, and more.

IsoMetrix is a product of Metrix Software Solutions Pty Ltd (www.isometrix.com), a leader in risk management software development, and is used by some the largest global mining companies as well as in the utility, energy and food sectors.

SustainNet Software Solutions Inc. (www.sustainet.com), a global software distributor, represents a range of specifically designed "best of need" software products to help organizations efficiently manage their data and information required to meet their social responsibility and sustainable development goals.
